The present invention relates to a method for producing two-component powder mixture which contains an iron powder and a zinc powder, in particular, relating to a method for producing two-component powder mixture containing a ferroaluminate and zinc powder. Two-component powder mixtures which contain (a) an iron powder and (b) a zinc powder are widely used for the production of reinforced cement-based materials, particularly for use in concretes. The manufacturer of these two-component powder mixtures has to provide a ferroaluminate containing silica sol as a binder as the only producer of the two-component powder mixtures containing an iron powder and a zinc powder. This ferroaluminate contains silica sol in powder form having a particle size in the range from 3 to 15 μm , so the ferroaluminate can be used as a conventional additive in concretes. Furthermore, the manufacturer of the two-component powder mixtures has to provide a zinc containing, inorganic zinc powder as the only producer of the two-component powder mixtures containing a ferroaluminate and zinc powder, for example, a zinc containing, inorganic zinc powder in the form of coarse particles and ultrafine particles. In recent years, zinc is being added to concrete increasingly, particularly as a barrier layer to improve the durability of the concrete; thus, increasing importance has been placed on (a) the zinc powder, (b) the zinc powder-containing, inorganic zinc powder in the form of coarse particles and ultrafine particles and (c) the ferroaluminate containing silica sol. The ferroaluminate in which the powder
